JUST ADDED A POSTSCRIPT

Scientist Capable of Great Psychological Work Was Not Strong on Common Sense.

Prof. Spinks, the scientist, who was engaged in a profound psychological work, rang for his manservant. Then he indited the following note to the police commissioner:

"I will thank you to send one of your men to arrest my cook. She has stolen my purse."

The servant, who had at once answered the bell, stood at his elbow, waiting for his employer to finish the note. He stooped to pick up something that was lying under the table. As the note was handed him the servant handed the object he had found to the scientist, remarking as he did so:

"Here is your purse, sir. It was lying under your table."

"Ah, you are just in time," observed the psychologist. "Give me the note."

This being done, the investigator of the mysteries of the human mind thereupon added the following postscript:

"The purse has just been found. It will, therefore, be unnecessary for you to send any one."

"Here, John," said the professor, "deliver this note at once. It is important."

And the learned gentleman resumed his work.—Harper's Weekly.

IN DRYEST KANSAS.

"I went into a drug store," said a sad-eyed man, "to get liniment for my rheumatism. I asked for liniment, and never winked; but when I got home I found the druggist had given me whisky."

"My wife then went and asked for liniment for me, and when she got home we found they had also given her whisky."

"Then I sent my prattling, innocent child to ask for medicine for her sick father, and the druggist wrapped up whisky. It is impossible to get anything in the drug stores of this town but whisky."—Kansas City Star.

BEAVERS ANNOY FARMERS.

Beavers are not only becoming plentiful in the Monnett country but are beginning to be destructive to many of the orchards of that vicinity. Many dams are now being placed in the North River Fork and the smaller streams tributary to the river in and about Monnett.

The farmers say that it is remarkable how fast these animals have multiplied during the last few years. —Long Creek Gazette.
